
Contents

January 2010

www.golfcoursearchitecture.net

- 08 Tee Box begins with a report on the ongoing controversy at Menie Links, the site for Donald Trump's latest development. We also hear about new courses from Hills/Forrest, EGD and Gary Player, among others.
- 22 AV Macan, Canada's democrat of golf, is this issue's pioneer, profiled by Canadian architect Jeff Mingay.
- 30 Anthony Pioppi asks whether the Mount Zion hole at Machrie would still have the capability to strike fear into the hearts of golfers.
- 33 Benjamin Warren of Golf Environment Organisation explains how a pioneering group of organisations are leading the movement towards lower resource/higher ecosystem golf courses.
- 35 Thomas Hoffman Jepsen shares his experiences of training to be a golf architect on the EIGCA's diploma programme.
- 37 Adam Lawrence asks why the Turkish region of Antalya-Belek has emerged as a successful golf destination and what it means for other golf regions.
- 38 Adam Lawrence reports on his recent visit to Lost Farm at Barnbougle Dunes, the new Coore and Crenshaw course in Tasmania, and foresees the emergence of the world's next great golf destination.
- 45 What place does synthetic turf have in golf? How can it be used and how is it installed? GCA finds out more.
- 52 Scottsdale, Arizona is one of the most densely golfed regions of the world. Toby Ingleton takes in a small sample of the 200+ courses on offer, and Forrest Richardson speaks about the challenges of designing within turf limitations.
- 56 On Site includes reports on Saadiyat Beach in Abu Dhabi and Golfbaan Heelsumse Veld in The Netherlands.
- 64 Holing Out sees some flawed routing at the little known Spine Valley GC.